We collect some non-personally identifiable information, including tracking your activities through your IP address or most-recently-visited URL. We do not collect any personally identifiable information unless you voluntarily submit contact information, like name, phone, email address, and mailing address by filling out a form, registering your email address or emailing us. We will likely place a cookie on your hard drive during the web visit. A cookie is a unique alphanumeric identifier that we use to help us identify the number of unique visitors to our Website, whether or not those visitors are repeat visitors and the source of the visits. Cookies cannot be executed as code or used to deliver a virus. Other servers cannot read them, and personal information cannot be gathered from them. They are simply an identifier shared between you and us to allow us to improve the services we offer to you through our Website. If you do not wish cookies to be placed on your computer, then they can be disabled in your web browser. The option to do so is found in your browser's "security settings" section. Permanently disabling cookies in your browser may hinder your use of our Website as well as other websites and interactive services.
